The Faculty of Environmental Management and Agriculture of University of Warmia and Mazury in Olsztyn unites tradition and modernity. The result of its 60 year history is the inheritance of the spirit of numerous scholars of Polish agriculture sciences. From the very beginning, it has educated specialists, who, irrespective of the political and economic situation, have tried to develop modern farming in the Warmia and Mazury region and outside its borders. The multidisciplinary education made the offered programs of studies attractive and laid the foundation for new faculties of technology, natural sciences and economics based on the growing scientific resources. What should also be stressed is the contribution of the Faculty staff to the preparatory work concerning organizational and curriculum planning issues of the University. Today the Faculty, which is at the top of the national rankings, offers candidates the widest range of areas of studies and specializations. It enjoys the great interest of youth from the north-east of Poland. There are always more candidates than the university can admit. The Faculty offers engineer and master's studies, both regular and extramural.

The Faculty of Agriculture and Environmental Management is a university unit which promotes people of both collective and individual success. The exceptional staff of academic teachers guarantee a standard of education which is comparable, and sometimes even higher than that offered at similar academic institutions. Those admitted every year in the Faculty of Environmental Management and Agriculture (ca. 800 students).
